

Artificial Blood Experiment:

The FDA Has Approved A National Experiment In Which Participants Will Not Be Informed of, Nor Their Permission Be Requested.

The FDA has approved Northfield Lab's experimental blood substitute "Polyheme" to be used in a trial study with what has been termed as "exemption from informed consent requirements on study participants."

As unbelievable as it sounds to many Americans, simply put the Federal Government granted permission to a private corporation to experiment on American citizens without either informing them or seeking their permission.

Most people would think to do some research if they were going to have some sort of surgery, but even scheduled surgery patients were unaware and uninformed they would be receiving not human blood, but an experimental substitute.

Consider this startling revelation, accident patients are randomly given the Polyheme as determined by a secret random drawing inside of the ambulances on the way to hospitals in the test cities. Again the patients were neither informed of the fact they were receiving the experimental substance, nor was their permission sought.

It really does make one wonder what George Orwell, author of the book "1984", would have to say about a Federally sanctioned experiment without the participants' informed consent; reminiscent of alleged World War Two medical experimental atrocities.

This experimental test on essentially unknowing Americans, referred to as "recruits", has been as extensive as 27 cities and as of the middle of 2006, is still being tested in 23 hospitals in 20 cities.

Northfield Lab claims that extensive information on the study has been made public. However, their methods of "informing" have, for all intents and purposes, left the overwhelming majority of the general public completely unaware of the trial.

To opt out of the study, contact Northfield Labs (<http://www.northfieldlabs.com/contact.html>) or a participating hospital and request a blue bracelet. If worn 24 hours a day and 7 days a week, you will be exempt from the trial.

Check the list below to see if you live an area where you could become when all's said and done a Federal Government sanctioned FDA trial participant, essentially a human guinea pig – without your knowledge or permission.
