Congress is Coming so Come to Congress

OK! The guy at the bottom of the page is announcing the upcoming National Knights Party Congress. This should come as no surprise to anyone because we have mentioned it many times before. But the date is approaching fast so I hope you are making solid plans to attend. No one leaves disappointed. We have programs for all ages and you will be impacted by the speakers, music and fellowship. There is an application included with this mailing which you can fill out and return to us or you can register on line at www.kkk.bz.

You really need to do this as soon as possible. Great changes and challenges are on the horizon and it is the manner in which we face those changes and challenges which will determine the kind of future our children will have.

We are going to make an important announcement at this year's congress which we believe will have an impact on the national awakening of our people.

Your registration can be sent online or by mail, but however you do it, do it today and we will make plans to see you September 2, 3 & 4.

For many of our people the future looks bleak and depressing. There seems to be little security for our children's future and little hope for a resurgence of the spirit that guided our forefathers across the Caucasus Mountains into the hills, valleys and forests of Europe, across the Atlantic and into the wilderness of America.

It was the union of our spirit with the Spirit of Almighty God that built cities, castles and cathedrals.

However, for many people, it is not just a dim future that awaits their children but the possibility of no future at all.

We are experiencing a nonwhite tidal wave washing upon the shores of America and many of our people have simply given up - convinced that the last vestige of our beautiful white civilization will soon perish off the face of the earth for ever.

Knights Party Congress
September 2, 3 & 4

That is why you need to be at congress. The abyss that seems to be calling us is only an illusion. This illusion is powerful and many have simply muttered, "What's the use, eat, drink and be merry for tomorrow we die," but you need to understand that this illusion has no foundation in truth. The power to overcome this Satanic lie has been in the blood of our race for generations.

Some have have said that our blood lies dormant. But that is not true. It is not our blood that is dormant - it is our spirit that is dormant. That is why your participation in this national awakening is so important. Make your plans now to attend and we will make history!

A History Lesson From Winston Churchill

Winston Churchill, was a British politician and statesman who served as Prime Minister twice (1940–45 and 1951–55). A noted statesman and orator, Churchill was also an officer in the British Army, an historian, a writer, and an artist. To date, he is the only British prime minister to have received the Nobel Prize in Literature.

I have in my library his four volume set, A History of the English Speaking Peoples. The following is a short account of the reconstruction period after the War of Northern Aggression commonly called the Civil War.

“The political reconstruction of the South ground forward in strict accordance with the harsh legislation of 1867. Under the superintendence of Federal military commanders elections were held in which the Negro for the first time took part. Almost a million colored men were enrolled on the voting lists. At the same time more than a hundred thousand Southern whites were disfranchised because they had been in rebellion. Negro voters were in a majority in five states. Yet the Negro was merely the dupe of his ill-principled white leaders. Those consisted either of Northern adventurers, known as “carpet-baggers,” whose main purpose in going South were to make fortunes for themselves and to muster the Negro vote for the Republican Party, or of Southern “scalawags,” who were prepared, for the sake of office, to cooperate with a regime that most Southern whites detested. Between 1868 and 1871 “carpet-bag” and “scalawag” Governments, supported by the Negro vote and by Federal bayonets, were deemed to have complied with the Radical requirements and were allowed to return to the Union.

Fraud, extravagance, and a humiliating racial policy were imposed upon the South by Radical rule. It could be maintained only by the drastic use of Federal power. To bolster up the “carpet-bag” Governments Congress initiated the Fifteenth Amendment, which laid down that suffrage could not be denied to any citizens on grounds of “race, color, or previous condition of servitude.” A series of laws placed Congressional elections under Federal management, and authorized the use of military force to suppress violence in the Southern states. These measures were prompted by the vigorous efforts of white Southerners, both by legal methods and by threats to Negro voters from secret societies like the Ku Klux Klan, to overthrow the “carpet-bag” Governments and restore white supremacy. For a time repression achieved its purpose, but gradually state after state was recaptured by white voters. The success was partly due to the stubbornness of Southern resistance and partly to a change in Northern sentiment. By the early 1870’s the ordinary Northerner had become fully alive to the political shortcomings of the Negro and was scandalized by the corruption of the “carpet-bag” Governments. . . . Northerners became weary of upholding corrupt minority Governments by force. They began to withdraw their support from the Radical programs. . .

In April 1877, a month after Hayes assumed the Presidency, and twelve years after Lee’s surrender at Appomattox, the last Federal garrison left the South. The remaining “carpet-bag” Governments promptly collapsed, white supremacy was everywhere restored, and the period of Radical Reconstruction was over.”

Balanced Budget

There is a lot of talk in Washington D.C. about raising our national debt ceiling. (What point is there in have a debt ceiling if it is not really a ceiling?) And though it may be all over by the time you receive this in the mail, I have some thoughts.

Our national debt is out of control. Most everyone is aware of this, but many don’t care. They are only interested in their short time pleasure and comfort and not the welfare of our children.

In D.C. many have gone on record stating that they will not support raising the debt ceiling for any reason. They are steadfast and refuse to budge. Likewise, the Kenyan says that he will not accept the Republican proposals. The fear of many Conservatives is that Obama will win the propaganda war in this debate because it will appear that the Republicans have nothing to offer but roadblocks. And if the Republicans lose this propaganda war it could destroy their chances of up-rooting Obama in 2012.

I think perhaps Republicans SHOULD support the Kenyan's budget plan which would include raising the debt ceiling. However, at the same time they need to make it known that they will give the president what he wants only because he is president and not because they believe in his agenda. By 2012, they would be able to not just talk about Obama's wild schemes, but the growing debt and the failing economy would make it self-evident that his economic programs are a failure and it is time to remove him from office. They would be able to claim that they gave him the opportunity - but his programs didn't work because he is a bad president.

By doing this they will expose the failure of Obama's socialist agenda. Again, the Republicans can claim Obama's agenda won't work, but it is more important to show it doesn't work by allowing him to have his way on this issue and allowing himself, therefore, to get buried under our growing national debt and thus insuring his defeat in 2012.

Poor Grizzly Bears

In early July there was a national story about a 57-year old man who was killed by a Grizzly bear along a popular hiking trail in Yellowstone National Park. According to parks officials, the victim and his wife were hiking the Wapiti Lake Trail when they happened upon a sow bear with cubs. Fearing for the safety of the cubs the mother bear attacked the man and he was mauled to death.

After the attack, all of Yellowstone's back country campsites and hiking trails in the area were closed. Rangers were on patrols to clear out all visitors from those back country areas, and bear warning signs were posted along the trail.

These extreme measures were taken even though this is the first bear-caused human death in Yellowstone park since 1986.

As a result there has been a heightened concern by campers and such incidents cause many people to avoid camping or hiking back trails.

The same kind of story could be written about shark attacks which cause many people to stay out of the water for fear of being eaten by a hungry shark.

If I would warn people stay out of the water because there have been shark sightings I would get a pat on the back and people would say "Thank you!" and stay out of the water. If I would tell campers in Yellowstone, "Be careful, a grizzly bear killed a hiker along this trail," many campers and hikers would thank me and find someplace else to go. They would take this extra precaution even though the number of people killed by sharks or grizzly bears is almost non-existent. However, if I would say you better avoid black neighborhoods or any place where Negroes are congregating in large numbers, I would immediately be called a racist, even though the number of Negroes who have killed or raped innocent people every year number into the thousands.

The danger from Negroes is so great that even veteran civil rights agitator, Jesse Jackson was quoted in the March 10th, 1996 edition of US News, as saying "There is nothing more painful for me at this stage in my life than to walk down the street and hear footsteps and start thinking about robbery -- and then look around and see somebody white and feel relieved."

Jackson is frightened when he hears footsteps behind him and is then relieved when he looks back and discover the footsteps are those of a white person. And well he should be frightened by those black footsteps and as to the rest of us, we also fear Negroes gone wild.

Although he didn't lose his life he was a victim of wild Negroes on September 4, 2010 while he was visiting Detroit for a "Rebuild America: Jobs, Justice and Peace." march and rally.

It was during this visit that Jackson's Cadillac Escalade was stolen. Though it was later recovered, it was found without its rims and one of its windows had been broken.

Even President Obama's grandmother was concerned about her safety around black men. Obama mentioned this in his book Dreams From My Father and also on March 18, 2008, in a speech on race relations in Philadelphia.

"I can no more disown him (Rev. Jeremiah Wright) than I can my white grandmother – a woman who helped raise me, a woman who sacrificed again and again for me, a woman who loves me as much as she loves anything in this world, but a woman who once confessed her fear of black men who passed by her on the street , , ,"

This fear that Obama's grandmother had, this fear that Jesse Jackson has and this fear you have when you get off the wrong exit of the freeway and suddenly feel a raise in your anxiety level because it is a "bad neighborhood" has more examples for its justification than the fear that the 57-year hiker felt when he came face to face with that grizzly bear. Yet, you are not allowed to express the fear of Negroes even though there is more danger from them than from grizzly bears. The reality is that death by a grizzly bear is rare, but death at the hands of an out of control Negro is common place. Another difference is this: you can say "Careful there there are grizzly bears roaming in the area!" without any fear of condemnation. But if you say "Careful, there are Negroes roaming in the area." you will be demonized.

Are all Negroes dangerous? Of course not, there are many fine, law abiding Negroes just as there are many peaceful grizzly bears who have never harmed anyone. But I still stay away from grizzly bears because I am never sure which one will want to steal my hubcaps.

Prussian Blue

Embracing Diversity

Lynx and Lamb Gaede were the girls who sang under the stage name of Prussian Blue. The lyrics of their songs were filled with expression of racial love, though some were a little extreme. The girls put out three CD's, Fragment of the Future (2004), The Path We Chose (2005), For the Fatherland (2006). Then suddenly they fell into silence. People have asked, "What happened to Prussian Blue?" - "Where are they at?" - "What are they doing?" Well, recently we found out!

The girls have decided that they can no longer accept these white racial beliefs and have embraced diversity. "I'm not a white nationalist anymore," according to Lamb, "My sister and I are pretty liberal now."

"Personally, I love diversity," Lynx seconded. "I'm stoked that we have so many different cultures. I think it's amazing and it makes me proud of humanity every day that we have so many different places and people."

I suspect that this will soon be all over the media as they proudly proclaim the transformation of these neo-Nazi girls who are finally "thinking for themselves." However, while they may boast and highlight the change of heart experienced by these two girls as some kind of proof that our ideas are wrong, the fact is everyday thousands of people across the nation are becoming fed-up with the so-called beauty of multi-culturalism and racial diversity and are seeking out groups like The Knights and are finally "thinking for themselves" and having a "Change of heart!"

I suspect the trouble with the girls was that they were not Christian and therefore had no foundation for their racial understanding or their lives. Their story is similar to the story of Geroge Burdi lead singer for RaHoWa who renounced his racial beliefs in the late 1990s. I suggest you go to www.ChristianRevivalCenter.net, click on Word of Truth archives and then click on video archives and scroll down to: The Sad and Strange Story of George Burdi and listen to this message. This will give you a better understanding of what happened in the heads of these girls.

There is a lot more I could write but I am out of space for this issue. I hope you will keep all of us here in your prayers. And keep Lynx and Lamb in your prayers also. Without the Shepherd (Jesus Christ) they simply lost their way. Remember to always follow the commandment of Jesus Christ to "Love our God" and "Love our people!"
